When I ran for State Senate in 2013 & 2014 I truly learned not only the importance but the value of stepping up and serving your community. Serving at a local level means that it is even more important to put parties aside. Our local needs are not about Democrat or Republican but us, as a collective, as a community. We cannot grow and manage our growth without community input. One thing I learned while knocking on doors campaigning for the state senate was that people have lost faith and even worse lost interest in the local and state issues. It is my hope to bring that back in our community. I want to see youth get involved. If we are not training our next group of leaders then we are not doing a good job. It's time to do better, we must do better and the time is now.
